Commander's Article

Where does time go when you're having fun? I cannot believe I am writing the Commander's article for the August Issue of our Scale Dimension.

Of course I will see you all Monday night as we crusade into the rubber power challenge at Hobby People. Since we start early for practice we will have hot Dogs, Sodas and chips. Your commander will be swinging the tongs n the BBQ grill so this should be a fun event and unusual for all of us.

I am impressed in the activity for this event and want to thank Mike Greenshields for talking Hobby People into this event. I thought my flyer was very cool until I saw Tim Cardin's and Larry Wolfe's flyers...I may leave Mine in the car. (Just kidding) I have never broke so many little balsa stringers in my life and I have small fingers too. What a cool throw back to our younger days when this was really cool and affordable modeling. It still is by comparison and I hope we do more of it in the future. This event will be the ice breaker and prepare us for our November 1st scale event at OCMA.

Before we fire up all the scale stuff, we will have a mass rubber launch; so don't stop building because size won't matter. We will launch the small stuff first than the over 18" versions right after while we have that early morning cool air. This also promises to be a very fun scale day for everyone involved at OCMA.

Please check out the website for the flyer and details. If you have anything that resembles a full size aircraft, bring it and fly. Plus the swap meet alone should get you out of the chair.

I hope to see you all Monday night and enjoy your company and the rubber powered event. This should be fun.

See you there,

Commander
